The memory modules for the Power Mac G3/G4 are easy to install, but the steps in this guide should be followed exactly. Please read this entire instruction guide before you begin.

TO INSTALL A NEW MEMORY MODULE IN YOUR APPLE POWER MAC G3/G4

1. Turn off computer.
2. Touch the metal cover located on the back of your computer to discharge any static electricity from your body.
3. Unplug the power cord.
4. Place a finger in the opening and lift out on the latch (upper-right side if you are looking head-on at the system – See photo to the right.)
5. Gently lower the panel onto a clean, flat surface, perhaps on a cloth, to prevent scratches on the side of your system.

6. Now that your computer is open, locate the four Memory Expansion Slots on the lower-right edge of the System Logic Board. (See photo to the left.)
7. Install memory into one of the four slots. If you are not filling all four slots at this time, fill the slots closest to the center of the System Logic Board and work outward. The memory module should gently, but firmly, be positioned in the Memory Expansion Slot. Note: Hold the module by the edges, with gold or silver "pins" facing down, and align the module connector to the connector in the Memory Expansion Slot. Do not force the module into the slot; the Computer's connector will only allow it to fit one way.
8. Close the panel by raising it to the upright position. Lock the panel back into place by applying even pressure to each side (thumbs on the screw placements) until the panel snaps into place.
9. Plug the power cord back into the system and ensure it is plugged into a power source.
10. Start computer.
11. Look under the Apple menu, "About this computer," to verify that your system recognizes the new memory upgrade(s).
